The Vice-Regal Ball

The ball given by the ladies of the Mount Vernon Association at the theatre last night, was in every respect worthy the Centennial, because no event within the century has equalled it in splendor. The appearance of the entire theatre, taken in by a single glance of the eye, cannot be described by any single word in our language, enriched as it has been by the polishing hand of time and the lingual treasures of an entire globe. It was a scene of fairy-like loveliness and beauty that must be looked upon or dreamed of to be fully conceived. That it recalled the ancient glories of Virginia in her monarchical days, when ruled over by a splendid government, and ere the seeds of that democracy which has since grown and flourished were sown, all recognized, and yet amid the gorgeous display of banners and all the magnificence of costumery, we felt that no Virginian there would have exchanged the simple democracy of the present for all the imperial grandeur of that grand past which our youth and beauty so truthfully represented and so elegantly commemorated. - Rich Whig.
The birthday of George Washington was never celebrated with more colat and enthusiastic display than it has been in the capital of his native State on this aniversary, occurring in the Centennial year of American independence.

The lineal descendants of the foreiathers of Virginia and the historical representation of those who did so much to achieve the liberty of our country are to-night assembled in the Richmond Theatre in a presentation of a Vice Royal Court ball at Williamsburg, of the time of Lord Botetourt, one of the Colonial Govern-ors of Virginia. The inhabitants of Richmond and, indeed, of the whole State are interested and enthusiastic in this grand pageant, and the theatre doors were thronged with crowds seeking admission as early as seven o'clock. The house was crammed from pit to dome with the most brilliant assemblage ever seen in the building. Despite the inherent democratic spirit of the Virginians, there was a palpable their part to boast that pride of heraldry not exactly in keeping with the ideas of this Centennial period. In the courtly colonial throng was discovered many a youthful "blood" and fair dame attired in the costume of over a century ago, who would willingly wear now the title of "My lady," "My lord," "His grace," or "His highness." The opening scene was brilliant and resplendent. The theatre was never so magnificently decorated. The throne occupied by Lord Botetourt was draped strictly after the style of the colonial period, and on all sides were suspended wreaths and festoons, the flags of Great Britain and Ireland. There was the Cross of St. George, the Union Jack, the lion and the unicorn, the Thistle, the Shamrock and the Rose; while prominently visible also was the flig of our own country. It is impossible to describe or even mention the historical relies that were displayed to-night, and they of themselves furnish a sed and serious course of recret that Viish a sad and serious source of regret that Virginia's Legislature refused to appropriate a and large stock of DRY GOODS. feb 10 paltry sum toward the exhibition of her own resources and historical reminiscences at the Nation's Centenuial. Among the historical by Mrs. General Harry Heth. This cup was carried by the mace bearers at the opening of the House of Burgesses, at Williamsburg, by all the colonial Governors after the reign of Charles the Second, by whom the cup was presented to the colony of Virginia. It is a massive concern of solid silver, handsomely engraved, and liberally plated with gold. It bears the coat of arms of old England and the old, Virginia Colonial Coat of Arms. "Virtuet et Labore florent Ces publicae." To this is added the coat of arms which Charles II. gave to the State when he presented this cup with the motto "En Dat Virginia quartam." Truly such a valuable relic as this should be preserved for the Centennial. There were innumerable other relics of a century ago which it would be impossible to describe fully.-Richmond correspondence New York Herald. It may be said without fear of exaggeration that this entertainment last night was the grandest and most beautiful ever seen in Virgioia. The Theatre was beautifully decorated with shields and banners from the ball-room floor up to the dome, and presented a most brilliant aspect.

All the features of the court pageant were in perfect taste and harmony, and showed the years hard hard of artists in the management.

ere very fine. This stately and beautiful minuet cannot be perfectly done by men of our day. The gay gallants and "bloods" of the last century were taught to walk as well as to ride and fence, and cannot be imitated except by the finest actors, who make them and their times a study. One of the most beautiful ladies in the dauce, and most elegantly attired, was Mrs. Russell Rob inson. The dress might be termed a poetic dream of the toilet. A straw colored brocade court train, once worn by Elizabeth Cromwell Russell, the grand-daughter of Oliver Cromwell. The petticoat of black ground closely embroidered with beautiful flowers of natural size and color. Antique lace ruffles and tuckers; a collar of diamonds, and aigrette and earrings of antique diamonds. The character repsented was the lady's great-grand-mother, . John Cabell, of Green Hill. eliss Lizzie Harrison, Miss Douthad, Miss lie Aylett and Miss Warwick wore beautiancestral dresses, which were as welcome to we eye of an antiquarian as to that of a "lady of quality" versed in the teminine technology of the toilet. Mrs. fom Moore wore a most beautiful dress. Among the characters were the Curtis children, represented by the Coffee children. It is supposed that this is an ancient Huguenot family who came to Virginia with the Count Dupuy. - Richmond Journal.
